HARNESSES

The easiest method of measuring the chest circumference (B) of your dog is by using a flexible measuring tape placed directly behind the front legs at the broadest part of the chest. The tape should be fairly tight without actually restricting the dog. The correct harness size is determined by taking into account both the circumference of the chest and the neck (A). All harnesses from our range are adjustable using the chest strap (e.g. the RANGER PROFESSIONAL harness), most of them however are multi-adjustable (e.g. the SOFTIE harness) and can be optimally adjusted to any body shape to ensure more comfort. All harnesses from the HUNTER range feature easy handling, an elaborate finish and soft padding.

As a rule: every harness should be tried on before purchasing in order to ensure that the fit pleases both animal and owner.
